

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Cars, COFFEE, and a SLIGHTLY USED CASKET

Customer service. It will drive a girl to eat more chocolate.

Dealing with customers day after day will drive anyone insane. Prepare to laugh until you cry.

Our favorite car dealer is back, kicking ass and taking names, and she's just as fabulous as ever.

Julia Karr is a used car lot owner and she isn't expecting an invitation to the popularity pool. Her business is drowning with past due accounts, difficult customers and crazy repossessions. In order to get the vacation of her dreams, Julia makes a deal with her husband.

After catching a burglar, tackling a customer, and looking down the barrel of a gun, it's clear to this feisty car dealer that her vacation may be harder to achieve than she thought. Daily chaos drives Julia to eat more chocolate, buy more wine, and prepare for the afterlife. She could blame it on the contractor, the cheap casket or a naked friend, but she'd rather blame it on the car lot.

Readers' Favorite: K.C. Hilton has a creative flair for writing and for comedy. Prepare for more laugh-until-you-cry moments, more cloak-and-dagger repossessions, and more exasperated sighs from Julia's husband, Romeo. If you like a twist of humor with your morning coffee and bedtime wine, then this book is a must-read! Julia Karr is the Stephanie Plum of car dealers.

About the Author

K.C. is a wife, mother and manages the family business. K.C.'s husband refers to her as Hobbit size and claims that she is "nuttier than a fruit cake." She owns a complete set of pink tools, believes in aliens and secretly wants to become a badass ninja. In her spare time, she can be found daydreaming about leaving work early to eat chocolate and drink wine. Sometimes her dreams come true.
